Speaker : Mr. LOO Hon Sung

Head, Health, Safety and Environment

The Hong Kong Polytechnic University

Mr. LOO Hon Sung has over 30 years of experience in overseeing and managing environment, health and safety (EHS), sustainability and product stewardship for multi-national organizations. He has extensive experience in process safety management as well as driving corporate safety culture in the Petrochemical, Oil & Gas, Specialty Chemical and Food/Chemical manufacturing industries. He was also a partner of an EHS consultancy firm that has major multi-national corporations like Singapore Airlines, Sentosa Development Corporation, Changi Airport Group and Chartis Insurance among their clients. During his regional assignment, he has lived abroad in Australia, China, India, Japan, Korea, Taiwan, Thailand and USA. He is currently the Head, Health Safety and Environment of The Hong Kong Polytechnic University.

Abstract :

Building a strong safety culture is a continual process and long-term goal of organizations aspiring for health and safety excellence. It is about effective implementation of comprehensive safety management system, process, standard in workplace, shaping positive mindset and safe behavior of people to do the right thing. Health and safety professionals have a key role in preparing for the challenges ahead in this safety evolution.
